DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hoshino (CA 2,422,103 A1) in view of Xiao ("Sampling and Determination of Gas Phase Divalent Mercury in the Air Using a KCl Coated Denuder", Fresenius J. Anal. Chem. (1997)).

Hoshino teaches the method of measuring continuously, fractionally, and on a real time basis the concentration of a total mercury (metallic and bivalent) through a parallel determination scheme, introducing mercury containing gas through two columns. One column removes divalent mercury [2], moisture and sulfurous acid gas [3,25,26] and passes the remaining gas to an elemental mercury detector [5,27]. The second column converts bivalent mercury to elemental mercury [13,30] using a fixed catalyst [30], and measures total mercury content [15,32]. See page 10, lines 1-13 and page 15 line 25 through page 17 line 25; Figure 2. Hoshino teaches the claimed invention except for the use of a catalyst as the divalent mercury removal agent in the first column.

Xiao teaches the use of a KCl coated denuder (column having a fixed catalyst) for determination of gas phase mercury (page 386). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use a KCl coated denuder as taught by Xiao in the invention taught by Hoshino to remove the divalent mercury in the first column, since this removes interfering divalent mercury from the arm devoted to measurement of only elemental mercury (similar to Figure 1). Xiao further teaches the importance of differentiation between the two types in measurement of gaseous mercury (page 386).
